If you can dream it . . . you can achieve it!

"There is a new generation of kids who are changing the rules about what is possible. They are creating their own paths, following their own visions, and inspiring others to do the same." This is the message behind authors Kristi Stoll and Gidget Clayton's new book, The Road to Teen Vision: How to Find Your Passion and Realize Your Dreams (ISBN 1-58270-117-2, $9.95, 200 pp, 6 x 9 inches, softcover).

It's harder for today's teens to pursue their dreams in a world where success is often measured superficially—beauty, money, status. The Road to Teen Vision is ready to change this perspective. As a teen and tween guidebook for transforming dreams into reality, The Road to Teen Vision teaches the reader how to identify their strengths, find their true passion, and use step-by-step methods for making their dreams come true.

The book features profiles of fourteen inspirational kids, ages 10 to 19, who discovered their dreams and then made them happen. Stories include:

- Rachael Scdoris, a 17-year-old, legally blind sled dog racer who will compete in the Iditarod in March 2005.
- Keisha McDaniel, a 15-year-old clothing designer and founder of Pretty Tomboy Clothing whose many accomplishments are currently making headlines.
- Matthew Balick and Justin Lewis, two 14-year-olds who created the toy and game, Flip-Itz.
- B.J. Pinchbeck, a 14-year-old web designer who founded a homework help site for kids on the Internet.
- Laura Lockwood, a 19-year-old who co-founded Manateens, the largest teen volunteer group in the nation.
- Amanda Dunbar, a 19-year-old painter who started at the age of 13 and now commands thousands for her prolific paintings.

Kristi Stoll and Gidget Clayton are two entrepreneurs who quit their corporate jobs, sold everything, and bought an RV so they could travel around the country interviewing amazing kids/teens. Armed with the powerful message of "living your dream," which was inspired by the stories they collected, these two authors intend to change the world. Currently residing in Southern California, Kristi and Gidget are working independently on other writing projects as well as co-owning two businesses, www.PlanetGiggle.com, an extension of their book The Road to Teen Vision, where kids/teens can find additional guidance and the resources to help them achieve their own dreams, and www.CreativeGiftsOfHealing.com, which is geared toward spiritually-minded women and men.
